Lord, Give your servant a heart to understand how to discern between good and evil.

God our Father,
Open our eyes to see your hand at work
In the splendor of creation,
In the beauty of human life.
Touched by your hand our world is holy.
Help us to cherish the gifts that surround us,
To share your blessings with our brothers and sisters,
And to experience the joy of life in your presence.

2020 MASSES AVAILABLE!

Saint Faustina - Diary 57

O my Jesus, You are the life of my life. You know only too well that I long for nothing but the glory of Your Name and that souls come to know Your goodness. Why do souls avoid You, Jesus? – I don't understand that. Oh, if I could only cut my heart into tiny pieces and in this way offer to You, O Jesus, each piece as a heart whole and entire, to make up in part for the hearts that do not love You!

Diocese of Hamilton "Blessing in the Mist of Trial"

"If there is one thing that this virus has done is open my eyes to all that I have taken for granted. My generation has not had too much to worry about – we have always had a job to go to, food on the table ... really a pretty good life. Today I wish for the things that I took for granted just a few months ago. I wish I could see my children and grandchildren and be able to give them a big hug. I miss having family around my dining table sharing the food we are so blessed to have. Each day all we can do is pray for God and the Virgin Mary to help us through this nightmare and continue to pray for mankind. Perhaps this virus is taking the whole world to its knees and has each of us with eyes more open and hearts wanting change. When this is behind us, I hope it leaves us better people than we are today."

What is the catch? Whenever we hear that something is "free," our suspicions kick in, what's the catch? When God offers us sustenance, blessings and new life, and insists that we do not have to buy or earn it, we have certain doubts. From the beginning, God has asked only trust and fidelity. People find this difficult, failing often. Human beings still suffer from the illusion that we can buy, earn or manipulate our way in our relationship with God. Never has material abundance and prosperity been so great, but neither has unhappiness and misery. God's invitation is to all who recognize their need and desire life.

God is not stingy with grace and blessings. God is generous, kind and merciful, so we should also show those qualities towards all and not think ourselves better than others. Paul reassures us: There is no power in the universe that can separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus. Height, depth, distance, time, life, death, earthly powers or any created thing, all are helpless in the face of God's love. We can never claim to be alone, abandoned or without purpose as long as we believe in God our Father. When we are in harmony with the Creator and with one another, there is no lack. When we are not, we experience the fearful, insecure and violent world we now inhabit. Instead of lamenting about having "only" five loaves and two fish, rejoice and give thanks.
