Reflection: When we make space for God in our lives and place Him first, He transforms the way we live and the way we love. From simple acts of hospitality to radical surrender, we are called to a deeper, freer love rooted in Christ.

In our Gospel today Jesus says, "Whoever loves father or mother more than me is not worthy of me," These are not easy words. Jesus is not asking for a place in our life—He is asking for first place. But Jesus is not asking us to love our families less—He is asking us to love Him first, so that we can love others rightly. When God is at the center, our love becomes freer, deeper, and less controlling. He then speaks about "taking up the cross." In His time, the cross meant suffering and total surrender. To follow Jesus is to let go of the need to control everything, to die to selfish desires, and to trust God even when it costs us something. This is not about losing life, but about discovering a fuller one. The world says, "Protect yourself." Jesus says, "Lose your life for my sake, and you will find it". That is the paradox of the Gospel: surrender becomes freedom, and small love becomes great in the kingdom of God. Even offering a cup of cold water to someone in need matters. It reminds us that discipleship is not only about big, dramatic choices but also about daily kindness, quiet faithfulness, and simple generosity. We are invited to ask: Who truly comes first in my life? And it reassures us that every choice made for Christ—big or small—has lasting value. So today, the question is simple: Where is God asking me to make space... What is He asking me to let go of... And who is He calling me to love more freely? May God bless us all.
